

Eggitarians get a new place to indulge their taste buds

Krishna Rander, Divyanka Tripathi, Rakesh Rath and Chandresh Kothari

Eggpire, a fast food restaurant, is inspired by the love for eggs. The grand opening of the third outlet was done by Divyanka Tripathi at Gorai, Borivali (W) in the presence of Krishna Rander, Garima Rander, Rakesh Rath, Chandresh Kothari, Swati Rajput, Naimun Khan, Prashant Sharma, DJ Sheelwood and Vikram Mehra. The event was organised by Mokshiva Wedding and Events.

Rakesh Rath (Brand Partner, Eggpire) said, "The intention is to make our food the hero of the place. We offer a wide range of egg dishes and impeccable services that will ensure that our guests keep coming again and again."

Added Chandresh Kothari, "Brand Partner, Eggpire). "Being an egg lover personally is what made me open this outlet. Attentive and friendly service and good food at affordable rates without compromising on quality is what we are aiming for."

Krishna Rander (Brand Partner, Eggpire) said, "We are looking for a simpler, quieter and more classic approach. We believe that while the place will leave a pleasant and long lasting impression on all its visitors, it should also appeal to a broader canvas of customers ranging from local to international."

Eggitarians can feast on dishes such as Egg 65, Russian Fry, Caribbean Fry, Butter Egg Mughlai, Rajasthani Mefil and Boiled Tikka among others. A trademark registered brand, it is the one of the only in the country to make egg
